

5th Behavioral Macroeconomics Workshop: Heterogeneity and Expectations in Macroeconomics and Finance

June 29th – July 1st, 2023

Call for Papers

Following the success of past editions, we are pleased to host the 5th Behavioral Macroeconomics Workshop on June 29th – July 1st, 2023. The workshop will be held in hybrid form, allowing both virtual and in-person sessions at the University of Bamberg in Bamberg, Germany.

Confirmed Keynote Speakers:

John Duffy

University of California, Irvine

Doyne Farmer

University of Oxford
INET

Cars Hommes

University of Amsterdam
Bank of Canada

As in previous editions, we particularly encourage submissions of new work on the following topics:

- Bounded rationality and learning in macroeconomic models
- Macroeconomic models with heterogeneous agents
- Agent-based macroeconomic and financial models, and networks
- Experiments on macroeconomics and financial markets
- Systemic risk, financial stability, and macroprudential policies
- Macroeconomic consequences of inequality
- Climate change macroeconomics and sustainability
- Big data and artificial intelligence in macroeconomics and finance

Authors accepted to present are expected to act as discussants of another paper in their session. Partial financial support is possible on an individual basis for accepted participants. Proposals for invited sessions are also encouraged.

Paper Submission

Prospective speakers should submit a PDF file of their paper or an extended abstract of around one page to workshop.behavioralmacro@uni-bamberg.de by Friday, March 31, 2023 at the latest. Please indicate in your e-mail whether you would like to present virtually, in-person or whether you are indifferent between these two options. If you are a graduate student (M.Sc. or PhD), please also indicate if you would be interested in presenting your work in a poster session. Notification of acceptance will be given by mid-April 2023.
